ADMIRAL BYRD DROPS UN FLAG ON SOUTH POLE

Famed Explorer Flies Over Pole For Second Time; Details Lacking TO EXPLORE WARM LAKES

Explorers Plan Expedition To Learn More About Oasis In Antarctic

ABOARD THE U. S. S. MT. OLYMPUS IN THE ANTARCTIC, Feb. 16—(Delayed)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd flew over the South Pole today and dropped the flag of the United Nations at the pole, dispatches from Little America announced. Byrd duplicated his feat of Nov. 29, 1929, by flying over the pole. The dispatches announcing the exploit did not state how far his plane had flown into areas never before beheld by human eyes.

Byrd returned to Little America at 11:45 a. m.—which is 5:45 p. m., EST—after a flight of nearly 13 hours.

Byrd sent a personal message to Admiral Chester Nimitz, U. S. chief of naval operations, written while he was circling over the pole.

Communications Bad
The significance of Byrd's dropping the United Nations flag at the South Pole was not explained. Radio communications with the Little America base and this headquarters ship was difficult most of Sunday due to atmospheric condition.

The flight over the pole is one of the most difficult navigational feats of air travel, because all the meridians converge at the pole.

Before the Mt. Olympus sailed from Little America for early evacuation, due to the ice pack, Byrd told this correspondent that he would like to make the pole flight himself to give the fliers the benefit of his experience in navigation.

Discovery Important
ABOARD THE U. S. S. MT. OLYMPUS, Feb. 16—(Delayed)—Plans for a full scale expedition to "the Land of Lakes"—an oasis in the heart of the snow-swept Antarctic—were revealed today as veteran explorers said last week's findings gave promise of being the most important single discovery of this entire polar survey.

A flying force of scientists will travel from the flagship of the western air task group on Feb. 24, to being intensive studies of the mysterious "Shangri-La" beauty spot in the midst of the otherwise desolate Antarctic wasteland.

Named 'Bunger's Oasis'
Fresh and comprehensive reports from Capt. Charles A. Bond's force gave a clearer picture of the location of the 40-square-mile area wherein lie

ONE MAN'S OPINION
By Walter Klerman

Gen. Marshall's wife says he can't eat shrimp without immediately getting weak—she should have kept the secret until after the Moscow conference.

It's going to get monotonous as the courses come out—shrimp cocktail, shrimp soup, shrimp creole and finally shrimp demi-tasse and shrimp pudding.

The gentlemen will have their cigars in the shrimp room.

We're still trying to find out what some of our earlier missionaries to Moscow ate at the dinner table that left them so weak at the conference table.

After every banquet Stalin added another concession.

When the conferences moved to Yalta the shrimp must have been running heavy.

By the second dinner Uncle Joe had a piece of Japan without having entered the Jap war.

Worst Air Disaster Kills 53 Persons

BOGOTA, Feb. 17—Searchers began the grisly task today of removing 52 bodies—remains of all but one of the 53 victims in history's worst air crash—from a 2,000-foot deep abyss near Colombia's Mount Talbazo. The other body was recovered on a debris-strewn shelf 200 feet below the peak of the treacherous 11,000-foot high mountain into which the ill-starred Colombian airliner ploughed Saturday before exploding.

At least eight Americans, including two crew members, were among the victims—all of whom perished either upon impact or when the flaming wreckage of part of the plane hurtled to the bottom of the abyss. Indicating that disaster might have been averted by a matter of feet, searchers who made the perilous ascent to the mountain peak found parts of the propeller motor and baggage scattered over the mountainside.

One searcher took this to indicate the forward part of the plane actually might have cleared the mountain top, with only the rear of the plane smashing into the ledge. The baggage was in the compartment in the nose of the giant four-motored DC-4, which was operated by Avianca airlines. The line lost another plane three weeks ago, when 17 persons were killed by a crash in the Magdalena jungle. Part of the cabin, and at least three bodies, were embedded deeply in the earth at the bottom of the abyss. Papers, books, fountain pens and children's shoes were scattered throughout the area. Among American victims aboard the plane, which came to a fiery end only 30 miles from Bogota on a routine 300-mile flight from Barranquilla, were:

Pilot Capt. Kenneth N. Poe and co-pilot George R. Kay, Jr. J. K. Husendick, Arlington, Tex., recently resigned as assistant manager of Texas Petroleum company in Colombia. Carl Hubman, Husendick's successor; C. M. Volpe, also of the Texas company; W. L. Wahn, American employee of the Tropical Oil company of Toronto; H. A. Burton of St. Charles, Mo., and Beno Slesin, employed as United Artists' manager in Colombia.

ARMY PROBING CRASH FATAL TO COL. JOHNSON
National Civil Air Patrol Chief, Two Companions Die In Ohio Mishap

CLEVELAND, Feb. 17—Army authorities opened an investigation today of the transport plane crash which killed Col. Earle L. Johnson, 52, national civil air patrol commander, and two other servicemen near Cleveland yesterday.

Staff Sgt. Kenneth F. Woods, Williamsport, Pa., Col. Johnson's crew chief, and Marine Pvt. Edward J. Malovic, 17, Cleveland, a passenger, also perished when the twin-engine C-45 crashed and exploded in North Royalton.

The craft, which the CAP chief was piloting, had taken off eight minutes previously from the Army air base at Cleveland airport and was en route to Washington, where Col. Johnson had headquarters at Bolling Field.

An eye-witness, Arthur T. Koepke, said that he noticed the plane but saw no fire. Suddenly, he said, it seemed to go into a sharp dive but the engines continued to roar.

Koepke said he called to his wife to telephone the fire department and then he "ran across the road and into the field just as the plane hit the ground about 500 or 600 yards ahead of me."

"As it hit the ground," he said, "three limbs and dirt flew into the air, and then it exploded."

Koepke called a neighbor to accompany him to the scene, where they found burning parts

Battle Over Bath May Take Assembly Spotlight

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 17—The legislature swung its attention from hundreds of millions of dollars to measly thousands today.

A brewing battle between the house and senate over just how much the assembly may increase appropriations over the 1945-46 biennium was sidetracked temporarily while the solons scrutinized the now-famous appointment of Edwin Bath, former Farm Bureau lobbyist, to the $8,000 job as "special assistant" in the agriculture department to succeed a $4,200 man.

Bath was appointed early this month to be special assistant to the director at $8,000 a year—plus a 10 per cent legislative increase raising the ante to $8,800—after the job of Bryan Sandles, Democratic civil service junior fair manager who successfully piloted the post-war revival of the state fair last year, was abolished when he refused to resign.

Here are some of the reasons the legislators are suspicious of the Bath appointment:

1. He is to receive $2,300 more than the director to whom he is named "special assistant."

2. Although a legal resident of Columbus, his appointment was a surprise to Franklin county Republican chairman William

COLD WEATHER IS DUE TO HIT OHIO TUESDAY
By International News Service
A sharp drop in temperatures over Ohio beginning late tomorrow was forecast today by the weather bureau.

Meteorologist C. G. Andrus said that it was a little early to determine whether the latest frigid attack will approach that of last week in intensity.

"We're definitely in the path of a cold air mass moving eastward out of western Canada," Andrus said. "But I will know better by tomorrow as to how badly this area is to be affected."

The weatherman said that strong winds and snow flurries could be expected tomorrow in advance of the cold.

Some snow fell over central and northeastern Ohio yesterday but little of it remained on the ground today. The state department of highways reported all roads normal except highways south and west of Celina, Mt. Gillead, Circleville and Batavia, which are slippery in spots.

REPUBLICANS TO VOTE TUESDAY ON BUDGET CUT

Hearings On Tax Reduction Bill Delayed Until Budget Is Settled

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—Senate Republican leaders agreed today to have the full GOP membership vote tomorrow on an over-all budget cut of between four and a half and six billion dollars.

The senate Republican policy committee ordered the GOP conference at a closed door session in which they laid down a tentative agenda on legislation. Committee members agreed also to decide whether the senate should begin holding Monday and Wednesday night sessions or meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Rep. Knutson (R) Minn., chairman of the house ways and means committee, announced that hearings on the proposed tax reduction bill will be delayed until both branches of congress have approved the proposed cut in President Truman's budget.

The tax hearings were scheduled to begin Wednesday, Feb. 19.

In a statement, Knutson said that at the time the date for hearings was set, it was anticipated that final action would have been had on the budget cut proposal.

Trade Also Delayed
Knutson said that hearings on reciprocal trade will also be delayed in the ways and means committee. These hearings were scheduled to begin on Feb. 24.

The delay in taking up the tax question in the committee will

General Lists Three Reasons For Not Wanting To Be President

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has removed himself completely from the presidential picture in answer to importunities by friends in Kansas who would like to put him up as a "favorite son" in the 1948 campaign.

The man who led the combined allied armies to a smashing victory over Hitler's forces in Europe in the second world war is a soldier who wants to stay a soldier.

The Army chief of staff, who holds the highest rank possible in the armed services of the nation—that of a five star general—has told well-wishing friends that he will not accept the nomination for the presidency in either party.

This was his answer to repeated pressures brought to bear upon him by high-ranking politicians in the middle west in the last few months.

The chief of staff wants to devote his entire energies to preventing the present tendency in the congress toward cutting budget appropriations to the point where he believes it will cripple America's armed defenses, and to serve out his time as a general of the armies entirely removed from politics as such.

The interesting thing about Eisenhower's "no" has been the reasons which he presented, and which came to light today.

These were:

1. He does not believe that a

U. S.-Russian Relations Show Increasing Strain

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—The tug-of-war between American and Soviet philosophies showed increasing strain at each end of the rope today.

State department officials pondered an official protest from Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov over what he termed a slanderous and hostile attitude on the part of U. S. undersecretary of state Dean Acheson.

In advance of any government comment on the Russian protest, both Republican and Democratic senators had come to Acheson's defense, contending that the remarks which aroused Moscow's ire merely emphasized a world situation of common knowledge.

Molotov, in a memorandum lodged with U. S. Ambassador Bedell Smith, took exception to Acheson's statement before a senate committee that "Russian foreign policy is an aggressive and expanding one." (Moscow reports quoted the undersecretary as saying "aggressive and expansive.")

According to radio Moscow, the Soviet government regards Acheson's statement as "a declaration which was a gross slander and hostile to the Soviet Union." Its utterance constituted "inadmissible behavior," the protest continued.

During the last 72 hours, from the American side of the wordy battle over conflicting ideologies, Secretary of State George C. Marshall told the senate foreign relations committee that world affairs are in a critical condition politically. Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mich., Republican chairman of that committee, charge bluntly that "our anxiety to establish mutual fair play and good will" seemingly was not shared by Russia. He charged that Mos-

RUSSIANS GET NEWS STRAIGHT FROM U. S. RADIO
WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—The "voice of the United States of America" went on the air in Russia today in an effort to give the Soviet people some unvarnished and unbiased facts about what goes on in this country.

At 1 p. m. EST (9:00 p. m. Moscow time), the international broadcasting division of the state department inaugurated its 25th foreign-language broadcast to let the peoples of the world have "the pure and unadulterated truth" about American life and philosophy.

Today's curtain-raiser—first of a daily one-hour broadcast—mixed up a straight world news report, typical American music and a narrator's dissertation on how the 48 states function both independently and within the framework of the federal union.

Also, the announcer told in Russian how American scientists had developed a synthetic chemical substance called piribenzamin which was giving marked relief to sufferers from hay fever, nettle fever and bronchial asthma.

Another scientific feature dealt with was a new method of photographing infra-red rays. Through use of highly sensitive photo-elements, U. S. astronomers are now able to study stars in the Milky way of a brilliance fifteen times smaller than heretofore available for observation.

Music on the program featured "Turkey in the Straw" a medley of cowboy tunes including "Git-Along Little Doggies," "Sittin' Up Holler," and "The Old Chisholm Trail," plus Cole Porter's "Night and Day." The program opened and closed on bars from "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

BARNARD FOR LILIENTHAL
Telephone Executive Tells Committee Nominee Is 'Great Individualist'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—Chester I. Barnard, New Jersey telephone executive who helped write the controversial Lilienthal-Acheson atomic report, told congress today that atom bomb secrets cannot be kept by the United States.

Barnard also deplored Canadian leaks on atomic secrets. He testified before the atomic senate committee in favor of the appointment of David E. Lilienthal to head the civilian atomic commission.

Barnard said: "There are just too many people who know these secrets. And there was too much given out of Ottawa to make me comfortable."

Barnard predicted that other nations would have the atom bomb in "five to 15 years." He said he doubted if any other countries have the A-bomb today because of the technological and industrial developments that must go with it.

Barnard is president of the New Jersey Bell Telephone company. He defended Lilienthal as "one of the greatest individualists I have ever met" and a foe of centralized bureaucracy.

Fears Leaks
The official expression of fears that bomb secrets will leak as he told Sen. McKellar (D) Tenn., Lilienthal's foe, that he advocates an international agreement for control.

McKellar asked, "why should we give our bomb secrets away?" Barnard replied: "I don't think they can be kept. For one thing, we have two partners—Canada and Great Britain. Many in those countries have the secrets."

As McKellar assailed giving the secrets to "nations like Russia who might or might not fight us," and "just take Russia's word that she wouldn't use it against us," Barnard asserted that any other course would bring totalitarianism to the United States. He said: "If we can't make arrangements for international control we will be driven into totalitarianism."

'Leviathan' Feared
Barnard said he fears "an international leviathan" but that he sees no other safeguard other than that proposed by the Lilienthal-Acheson board.

He said: "Mr. Lilienthal evinced as much distrust of creating an international octopus as any of us." Barnard said that Lilienthal evinced stronger fears than the others "about centralized bureaucracy."

The telephone executive said he was "surprised" at that, but

Surprised at Stand
"To my surprise I found Mr. Lillenthal to be one of the great individualists I ever met."

The committee also heard house unAmerican committee investigator Robert Stripling testify that he had never seen a photographic copy of the letter that Henry C. Hart, former Tennessee Valley authority employee, allegedly wrote a Communist official at Birmingham about Communist activities in TVA.

Public hearings resumed today on the Lillenthal confirmation after a week-end of secret huddles on how to "negotiate" his withdrawal from the nation's top atomic post.

'Not Man To Quit'

Intimates of the chairman-designate of the atomic energy commission had this answer for the committee's undercover discussion of withdrawal possibilities: "He's not the man to quit in a fight."

Lillenthal himself had no comment on the situation, but it was reliably reported that President Truman would discourage the former TVA chairman from requesting that his nomination be withdrawn. Mr. Truman last week said he would support Lillenthal to the end.

Col. Johnson served three terms in the Ohio legislature from Lake county, where he formerly lived in Painesville, and during that time he learned to fly. He was named CAP head in March, 1942.

State department spokesmen have been openly critical of Soviet propaganda, which they claim is undermining American good will and integrity in central Europe and China. The U. S. broadcasts will attempt to offset this condition.

In Washington, Acheson received bi-partisan support for the remarks he made before the senate inquiry into the appointment of David E. Lillenthal as chairman of the United States atomic energy commission.

Sen. Hickenlooper (R) Iowa, said any impartial observer knew the undersecretary of state was merely voicing an apparent view of Russia's foreign program.

Sen. Johnson (D) Colo., and other minority party members expressed similar views, adding that the Soviet government had placed an entirely wrong interpretation on Acheson's testimony.

cause a delay in the date that the proposed tax slash comes up for house consideration. The Republican leadership had planned to bring the tax reduction measure to the floor about March 1.

Sen. Taft (R) O., chairman of the policy committee, announced that his group thought that the final budget cut "ought to be determined by the conference" and called all Republicans to meet at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Cut Not As Drastic
A senate stand for a budget reduction of less than six billion dollars was virtually conceded by Sen. Bridges (R) N. H., who pointed out that there was considerable support for the four and a half billion dollar figure.

The legislative program outlined by Taft included, in order of attention, the excise tax bill coming up today, followed by the budget resolution Wednesday. Taft said the budget resolution "may take a week or 10 days."

Other Debate Slated

Next in line for senate consideration, Taft said, would be the merchant marine extension bill, portal-to-portal pay legislation, limitation of presidential tenure to two four year terms, the David E. Lillenthal limitation, the sugar and rubber control extension bills, a bill dealing with presidential succession, the Smith bill creating a scientific foundation and finally a general labor bill.

Taft said he personally believed it would be possible to reduce taxes by three and a half billion dollars even if an over-all budget cut of less than six billion dollars was fixed. He said it would simply mean that less of the savings would be applied on the public debt.

Taft said that the Republican recommendation on a budget cut would be "not less than four and a half or more than six billion dollars."

COURT REJECTS CLAIM DURANT'S BROTHER HELPED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17 — The military court trying Col. Jack W. Durant for theft of the Hesse crown jewels ruled today that evidence was insufficient to show that the accused's brother was a "co-conspirator".

This ruling followed a charge by Capt. D. M. Proctor, Jr., assistant judge advocate, that James E. Durant, Falls Church, Va., councilman, acted as an "agent" for his brother.

Military court records showed today that Col. Jack W. Durant, accused of filching the Hesse crown jewels, attempted to find out before the gems disappeared what the rap was for a "finders keepers" policy overseas.

This disclosure was made with the opening of the second week of Durant's court martial trial in the pentagon.

Evidence placed before the court brought to light that Durant made inquiries in Germany regarding penalties for getting caught with such valuables as "Hitler's silverware and the Kaiser's jewels."

MARRIAGE LICENSE

Marriage license was granted in Pickaway county probate court, Saturday, to William Edward Rhinesmith, 22, farmer, Ashville, and Anabel Dennis, New Holland. The Rev. H. D. Fudge, Ashville, was designated to perform the ceremony.

THRILLERS WILL NOT PUT JUNIOR BEHIND BARS

Educator Says Movies, Radio, Comic Strips Do Not Hurt Children

CLEVELAND, Feb. 17 — If junior turns out to be a gangster or little sister gets her life in a tangle, don't blame comic books, movies or radio programs.

A prominent Cleveland educator exonerated those three favorite forms of juvenile entertainment today of abuse which has been heaped on them.

"No child ever went wrong because of a radio program or a movie," said Dr. Clarence B. Allen, professor of education at Western Reserve university.

"He had the tendency or the attitude beforehand, and the movie merely gave him the technique to carry it out."

Dr. Allen's statement is based on a study he has been making to determine the effect of movies, radio programs and comics on children.

His 17 years as a WRU education professor has kept him in close contact with all ages of school children, as well as parents and teachers.

The information, opinions and observations Dr. Allen has collected also are the basis for further startling declarations.

He believes that children cannot grow up normally in this country without an average diet of movies and radio programs.

"If a child gets nightmares from over-dramatic radio programs," he asserted, "or becomes morbid from certain movies, then such things are bad for him."

"But if there is no apparent reaction on the part of the child, then parents should not try to over-protect him by keeping him away from these amusements."

Dr. Allen urged against attempts of parents to "pre-digest" their children's entertainment.

He added:

"Life doesn't treat the child that way. The poor manners, bad language, intoxication, or over-idealized love scenes the movies portray can't be avoided in real life. The child must learn to live with such things, and judge them in his own mind."

The educator maintained that homework cannot and should not compete with movies, radio programs and comic strips.

Instead, he advocated a lengthened school day in which a child should do homework, leaving the evenings free for recreation. Such a setup also would solve the problem of what he called "terrible double-bills" many movie houses put on as children's fare over the week-ends."

"The average parent," Dr. Allen concluded, "should judge a movie or radio program by its effect on the child and not by content alone. There is no sense to ineffectual criticism or over-protection of the child."

"Reasonable censorship should be encouraged and supported, but home training should give the child standards by which to judge."

"From then on it is up to the child—and statistics prove that children are becoming better every generation."

A Weak, Run-Down Feeling Is Often A Warning That The Red-Blood Is Getting Low

If you do not feel like your real self, do not have the urge to be up and doing, why not check-up on your blood strength? Look at the palms of your hands, your fingernails, your lips, the lobes of your ears—are they pale and off color?

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloating and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Here's the true story of a man who took treatments, used all kinds of remedies for his sciatic, neuritic pains without being helped in the slightest degree. Mr. Robert Jordan of Colon, Mich., suffered agony from pains in his hip-knee—calf of legs. The pain at times was so bad that he couldn't get down. He tried several different treatments, many different medicines, all of which did him no good. He couldn't work. Life was misery for him.

Then one day he saw an advertisement of Muscle-Rub — the doctor's prescription — and in desperation bought a bottle. He used it as directed and in 3 days the pains were relieved and Mr. Jordan was back on the job.

Soil Conservation Notes

By J. A. Muster

The amount of production per acre being the primary gauge of the farmer's profits, a program of land use and crops management that will result in the maximum per acre yield, should be of great concern to every farmer. Many who are slow to adopt new farming patterns, fear that their production may be curtailed by so doing while, as a matter of fact, just the opposite is true.

The total digestible nutrients grown per acre, whether it is good for direct human use or for feed for farm animals, is the factor to consider since indigestible food or feed has no nutritional value. A comparison of several rotations all of which are used in Pickaway county shows that the old soil depleting rotation of corn, oats, wheat and clover yields but 2533 pounds of total feed nutrients per acre while a rotation of corn, wheat and clover yields 3016 lbs. The New rotation of corn, wheat and 2 years of alfalfa-grass meadow is farther ahead of the 3-year rotation than the latter is ahead of the old corn, oats, wheat, clover plan. The new 4-year rotation with 2 years of legume-grass meadow yields 3750 lbs. of t. d. n. per acre while the 5-year plan with 3 years of legume-grass sod yields 3950 lbs of t. d. n.

Most fortunately, the fertility of the land increases with the use of the higher yielding rotations while the productivity of the land decreases with the older rotations, as experience has demonstrated.

With the war finished as long as it has been, the advisability of changing to a better cropping plan that is best fitted to coming conditions, suggests itself. The best time to start the new plan

NOT ONLY THE ARABS

BRITAIN'S plan to move 100,000 displaced European Jews into a federalized zone in Palestine turned out to be a compromise satisfying no one. In an illuminating article in the current Atlantic Monthly, W. T. Stace, former British civil servant in Ceylon, now professor in Princeton University, says he believes the Zionist aim of a homeland in Palestine violates the rights of the Arabs to self-determination. The Arabs have the same justification for opposition to Jewish colonization that the United States had, for example, in its oriental exclusion acts. The Balfour Declaration of 1917 this writer characterizes as "a piece of muddleheadedness." Because it was basically wrong, he believes attempts to carry it out will mean continued controversy, with disastrous threats to the peace of the world.

The solution which Prof. Stace advocates is speedy settlement of displaced Jews in all countries. It is an obligation not exclusively of the Arabs, but of all nations, to take in Jewish refugees. This, he it added, is in substance the recommendation of the Atlee-Truman British-American commission on Palestine. It is also the view of a large segment of world Jewry which looks at Judaism as a religion and not a nationality and thinks of Jews as of Catholics, Methodists and Mohammedans, as citizens of all countries, not alone of an autonomous Jewish state.

WHO'S A BARBARIAN?

ARE WE barbarians? Many of us are, says Dr. Foster Kennedy, a medical professor at Cornell University. The test is whether a man (or woman) needs to be amused from the outside, by constant visits to night clubs or movies or by leaving the radio on. If you cannot keep yourself occupied and happy without such help all the time, then don't call yourself civilized, says the doctor.

However that may be, there is a lot to Dr. Kennedy's statement that people who leave the radio on all the time don't do so to hear what it offers. They want something not to listen to, but to talk against.

CARELESSNESS

THE MORE comfortably we live, the more we seem to run into unexpected troubles. And sad to say, many of them are connected directly with electric facilities counted on to do a family's domestic thinking for it. Troubles, for example, like one reported the other day concerning an occupant of a third floor, a woman who stepped out of the house leaving an electric iron plugged in. When she returned, the iron had burned through the ironing board, fallen to the floor and started a fire that came near burning down the house. Even the best appliances require some attention.

Strikes seem to be dropping off. This is good not only for the industries concerned, but because labor legislation is more likely to be drawn in an atmosphere free from unreasoning wrath.

Peace Overtures Between
AFL-CIO Now in Offing

Murray Desire to Retire
Regarded a Merger Factor

Special to Central Press.

WASHINGTON—Prospects for something definite developing from the AFL-CIO merger talk are better now than at any time since the possibility was first discussed.

For one thing, the AFL treated the CIO as an equal in submitting its proposal of "organic unity." The federation did not adopt its old tone of asking a wayward child to come back home.

Moreover, peace overtures between the two groups are in line with labor's general effort to put its house in order and avert repressive legislation. Another factor is CIO President Phil Murray's desire to retire. He is tired of the bitter factional fights in his organization.

John L. Lewis' support of the merger idea is also a convincing reason for believing that it may get somewhere. Lewis is on the AFL committee named to talk with CIO leaders. The UMW chief built the CIO and for a long time has favored unification of the two major labor organizations.

GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL'S accession to the state department secretariat has caused some odd repercussions in that state old service. The traditionally-civilian organization has become a little worried that the discipline that covers the armed forces may be extended now to include the "first line of defense"—diplomacy. Quite aside from the fears that vibrate down the line to the lowest clerk when a new boss takes over in the government, and

ASSIGNMENT: AMERICA

By Kenneth L. Dixon
Distributed by International News Service

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—During the last week, a Washington promoter was sentenced to 90 days in jail and fined $250 after being convicted of contempt of congress.

The charge was failing to provide personal records demanded for inspection by a congressional investigating committee.

In sentencing, the judge said: "The power of congress to investigate is vital. It must be affirmatively upheld, for it is necessary in our plan of government."

There are few citizens who would disagree with the judge's point of view, or dispute the verdict in that particular case. But there are several legal observers lounging around on capitol hill nowadays who are beginning to wonder just how far congressional investigations can go without violating the constitutionally-guaranteed rights, freedoms and privacy of the individual citizen.

As things now stand, the average private citizen may be called before a congressional committee on the merest hearsay, handed along until it reaches some member's ears.

He can not refuse to appear, without risking being in contempt of congress. Yet, once he appears before that committee, he is so stripped of legal armor that he stands more unprotected against unfair and unfounded charges than any thief or murderer in any court in the land!

He has neither defense nor offense against incriminating innuendo or damaging accusations, for his questioners remain invulnerable in the immunity of their congressional roles.

Thus, he can not fight back—he can not force them to substantiate their charges, prove their implications—or even identify the sources of their so-called information.

Giving congressional committees such powers has its obvious purpose, as the judge stated, in assuring them of gaining every scrap of information before passage of vital laws or confirming equally vital executive appointments.

But certainly it never was intended to turn congressional committee rooms into mud-slinging arenas for the fighting of old political battles—or for the persecution of unprotected private citizens.

And, sometimes that seems to be happening.

Spend a day in some committee rooms, and then talk to witnesses outside afterwards—witnesses who were charged with no misdoing whatever but were merely called to give information.

You hear angry mutters: "The way he asked questions, I'll bet everybody thinks I've got a prison record—and I've never even had a traffic ticket! Who does he think he is!"

"Asking me if I'd ever had any trouble with my books! Sure I have. What book-keeper hasn't? But he made it sound like I was an embezzler or something."

Somehow, you doubt that early American statesmen ever intended congressional committee power to be used for such a purpose.

NAZI FOUND GUILTY

HANS FRITZSCHE, the head Nazi propagandist, is not to escape punishment. Though the International War Crimes Tribunal at Nuremberg acquitted him, a German de-nazification court has just sentenced him to nine years imprisonment at hard labor and confiscated all his property except the sum necessary to support his wife and daughter.

This action is likely to make Americans view the Germans with more favor. Conceivably that consideration may have influenced the verdict.

Dangers That Lurk in Colds

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

NOW is the time of year when many people not only contract virus pneumonia, but ever present, too, is our old winter enemy—the common cold.

For years now, both physicians and the "man in the street" have been hoping that medical science would come up with a preventive and cure for the common cold. At times it has looked as if these hopes would be realized, though each new "cure" is hailed with great acclaim, it proves disappointing on trial so that today we must in honesty admit that there is no known method either of preventing or of limiting colds or even of overcoming them rapidly when once they have developed.

A Small Organism

The cold is probably caused by a virus, the smallest of all disease-producing organisms and the one which, generally, we know least about. It is hoped that a concerted laboratory effort both in America and abroad will be made in the future to learn more about the virus responsible for the cold so that a preventive vaccine may be developed.

Colds in themselves are probably not dangerous although, of course, they cause a great loss of time from work. Their chief danger lies in the fact that they open the door to secondary infection with germs such as streptococci, staphylococci, and pneumococci causing pneumonia. In view of this fact the modern man is lucky to have the advantages of such things as sulfonamide drugs and penicillin.

Lessons Symptoms

In many cases, the administration of these preparations not only seems to lessen the severity of the symptoms, but also helps in preventing infections of the middle ear, the sinuses and the lungs. By all means the sulfonamides or penicillin should be used in most cases, under the doctor's direction, when complications of a cold develop, particularly when they are due to streptococci, staphylococci or pneumococci.

In some instances it is recommended that the sulfonamide drugs be used in the form of a spray into the nose or throat. In others the use of a penicillin solution spray into the nose, throat or both is recommended. In some instances the penicillin may be given by injection under the skin or taken by mouth.

A person with a cold of any severity will do best if he remains in bed at rest. This not only will help him get well faster but will also keep him from coming in contact with well persons and spreading the infection to others.

The diet should be moderate, well-balanced and, of course, plenty of fluids should be taken. If fever is present, it is always well to have a physician, since the fever may indicate the beginning of one of the many cold complications.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

AT THE river bank Cliff looked back. Beside the path, the vaquero lay face downward, while from his horse Sloan stared after them, Cliff jumping into the launch, Cliff lifted Janet up beside him.

"No, but I could kill him. Even now I could—" She choked, and big tears of anger filled her eyes.

Starting the motor, Cliff steered the launch out into the stream. One thing puzzled him—why had the vaquero dared to raise a hand against Janet? Cliff had heard tales of Madison's violent temper, and no vaquero would be reckless enough to arouse it, especially where Janet was concerned. The only rational explanation was that the man had been driven to uncontrollable fury under the stinging contempt of her blow.

Sloan's attitude was more easily understood—he would hesitate to interfere with one of his own vaqueros in an altercation with a Blacklander.

Cliff looked back at Janet. She sat with face partially averted, watching the liana-covered banks, and he could see she was still shaken. Yet even while he watched her he realized that there was a Janet he would never have believed existed. When she struck the vaquero she had been all fire. The old timidity, the withdrawal into her shell, had vanished utterly. Cliff thought of the vaquero's outraged surprise, and unconsciously he smiled. Then he felt Janet's eyes on him.

"Do you happen to be laughing at me?" she asked.

"Not a laugh in the world." He saw the little frown gather, and added quickly, "Now don't let's start a battle of our own until I turn you up from your last one." He fixed the launch toward the bank, and stopping the motor, took out his handkerchief and dipped one end in the river.

"Come over here," he said. "If I don't polish you a little before we get to camp, Casey will swear I've yielded to an ancient impulse and manhandled you."

Submissive as a child, she sat beside him while he wiped the tear-stained cheeks. "Who," he reflected aloud, "who would ever suspect that this quiet, well-mannered person was a jungle cat, with claws and flashing eyes, who jumps vaqueros—"

"I know," she interrupted. "You told me I'd get into trouble, and I did—the very first time."

"I wasn't thinking about that." "What were—"

"Hold still." He moistened his handkerchief again. "I don't understand how people can get tears behind their ears, but you've managed."

He gave a last dab at her face, then sat back and surveyed her. "That's fine." He stuffed the handkerchief in his pocket. "You know," he went on, "I often used to wonder what you would be like if you ever took off your veil."

"Veil?"

"Yes—dared be yourself, let yourself go. Just as you did today. That vaquero surprised you into being human." Cliff was smiling, but his voice was serious. "There was something sublime about the way you cracked down on the two-bit bully. I saw flames in your eyes that matched your hair."

"Don't make fun of me, Cliff. I'm not." He laid both hands on her shoulders. "Look at me." Wonderingly, she obeyed.

"All I'm trying to say is—don't crawl into your shell again. You've built a wall between us that I don't want because it hides a very real person from me. Don't be afraid of your emotions. It's only when your blood starts singing that you fully live."

"My blood was singing in anger. Is that what you want?"

"No. Anger isn't the only thing that makes the blood sing." The launch had stopped, the bow resting against the bank, while with both hands on her shoulders he waited, feeling without quite knowing why that they had reached a crossroads, that the next moment might have the power to decide whether she would lay aside that self-protective veil and accept him as a friend, or withdraw beyond his reach forever.

And as if Janet too felt the decisive quality of that moment, she became absolutely still, then slowly her hand moved to her throat in the old gesture of uncertainty. The sleeve of her blouse slipped back, revealing the mark of the vaquero's hand on her arm, and against her skin's whiteness the bruise stood out blue and angry. For the first time Cliff realized she must be in pain.

"You poor kid!" Swept by a sudden impulse of commiseration too instinctive for thought, he stooped and touched the mark with his lips. She gave a sudden intake of breath, and raising her arm, gazed for a second at the place where his lips had been. Then her dark eyes lifted to his face, holding his eyes with her own, searching them as if they would plumb the very depths of him. Once again, in a long, tremulous inhalation, her breath rose, she swayed, and now his arms were about her, and through one blinding second his lips covered hers. Her body could not be sure, her own lips softened to his, but in the next instant she shrank back out of his arms. Eyes clouded with fear, she steadied herself.

"Please—" he could scarcely hear her voice—"don't ever do that again. Not ever."

"Janet—" He stopped. She walked slowly to the bow of the launch, and when she turned he knew that once again she had withdrawn into herself.

"I'm sorry," he said. "Let's not talk about it."

Angry at himself, he started the motor. It would be his own fault if she were more remote than ever. And yet—there had been that brief instant of response, that second when she gave him her lips. Or had it never happened? All he could be sure of was that he had been unbelievably clumsy.

Night had fallen when they reached camp. A light burned inside the office, and as they entered Cliff saw Madison standing by the window. A frown darkened the little man's face, and ignoring Cliff, he looked angrily at Janet. "You're late. I thought we had a date for dinner up in New Dixie."

"Sorry," she answered listlessly. "I'm terribly tired."

Eager to visit his resentment on someone, Madison eyed Cliff sourly. "Do you have to play the slave driver every day and every night? Or did you just take her with you to break our date?"

It was on Cliff's tongue to tell him that Janet had come because she wanted to, but he only answered, "It was part of the job, and we're all working long hours."

Madison turned to Janet again. "I heard what happened at Antonio's farm this afternoon. That vaquero has given me trouble before. Did he hurt you?"

Janet shook her head. "Not much."

But before she could prevent it, Cliff pulled back her sleeve. "This is his handiwork," he said.

The effect was explosive. Madison's eyes contracted to pinpoints of sheer malevolence. "I wish I'd known that," he almost panted the words, "I'd have killed him."

"I suspect he regrets it already," Cliff suggested.

Madison walked toward Cliff and stood glaring up into his face.

"Yes, I heard what you did to him. If you don't mind, I'll take care of my own vaqueros myself. You needn't trouble."

Cliff shrugged. "No trouble at all. A pleasure." He was beginning to dislike that dictatorial tone.

Madison's rising anger was far from appeased. "What we're talking about things I don't like," he rapped, "I understand you've been leasing sites for docks and storage space from these Blackland people."

Cliff nodded. "That's correct."

"Are you paying them?"

"Of course."

"Well, stop it. The Blacklanders are squatters on land that belongs to New Dixie. Paying them is a moral admission they have a legal right. When you want to use their land, use it. If they don't like it, knock their ears down, or tell me, is that clear?"

"It's clear enough, but not the way I operate. I'll pay as I go."

Madison's uncertain temper flared again. "Maybe I better remind you that you're not here to help the Blacklanders."

Evenly Cliff answered, "Maybe I better remind you that I'm here for just one thing—to get rubber. Until the Blacklanders interfere with me, I'm not taking sides."

For some reason Madison smiled. "And if they should interfere?"

"I'll cross that bridge when I come to it."

Talent, lying in the understanding, is often inherited; genius, being the action of reason and imagination, rarely or never.—Coleridge.

founded on practical and tested bases and facts.

The Birthday Forecast

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a year of high tension and accomplishment, with new interests and projects moving at accelerated tempo toward advanced goals. Strokes of genius, originality and audacity may carry on to dramatic achievements. However, such major objectives should have sound and provable techniques, constructive and practical, with facts and not confused theories as foundation.

A child born on this day should have spectacular talents, ambitions and skills, with great expectations. However, its mental equipment is not to be relied upon, being tricky and misleading.

Hints on Etiquette

It is not incorrect to use the wife's name on the letter box or door of the apartment, but it is customary to use only the husband's card in the space provided for the name.

Today's Horoscope

If born in this month you are fortunate. You have exceptional opportunities in love, business or a career, and can rise to the top. You are very considerate to those dear to you. You love with vigor, and your home life should be ideal. The day's auspices are good. Anything undertaken today should meet with success. All-though some good fortune is evidenced in the new year just starting for you, you will need to be careful of finances to avert loss. Impulsive changes are not recommended. Be content with slow progress during this period. The child who is born on this date will have a varied career, gain and loss being strangely intermingled. He or she will be highly intellectual and clever, but not too fortunate.

BADGERS SEEK WIN OVER BUCKS

Victory Saturday Will Just About Sew Up Big 9 Title For Wisconsin Five

CHICAGO, Feb. 17—A victory over Ohio State Saturday night, coupled with helpful developments in two other Big Nine basketball games this week, will do the trick for Wisconsin.

"The trick," in this case, means exclusive possession of the Big Nine title, a matter about which Wisconsin has been rather exclusively possessive ever since the first game of the season. At that time, one recalls, the Badgers "upset" Illinois, and Bud Foster's men haven't relinquished their lead since.

Nor do they intend to. Foster, who last saw a Badger quitted grab the Big Nine diadem in 1941, already is eyeing the N. C. A. A. tournament. It was in '41 that Wisconsin went from its Big Nine championship to victory over Washington State in the N. C. A. A. finals, and today those sweet memories were crowding the campus at Madison, Wis.

Wisconsin, by every formula known to science, figures to lick down-trodden Ohio State on Wisconsin boards Saturday. That in itself will insure at least a title tie for the Badgers. Convenient losses by Illinois and Indiana will make it an exclusive Wisconsin party.

Following Saturday night's home date against Ohio State, the Badgers must end their season with a couple of on-the-road roughies—Purdue and Minnesota. Even then, however, they will take a lot of catching and very conceivably can back into the title if necessary.

Tonight's uninspiring doings comprise three league games—Iowa at Minnesota, Michigan at Purdue, and Northwestern at Indiana.

BUCK ATHLETES WIN TWICE; SET SWIM RECORDS

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 17 — If Ohio State fans strutted a bit today, it was due to the heady afterglow of the most successful Buck sports weekend of the Winter campaign.

Among Buck achievements were:

1. The first basketball victory of the season away from home, a 58-to-46 triumph over Michigan State;

2. Shattering of three more records by Ohio State swimmers in a backstroke relay exhibition at the central Ohio high school meet;

3. A spanking scarlet and Gray victory over Iowa and Northwestern in a triangular track meet at Chicago, and

4. A mildly surprising tie achieved by the underdog Buck wrestling team against Purdue's grapplers.

Bob Bowen, the Martins Ferry senior who couldn't even make the first team in December, scored 21 points as Ohio romped to their basketball victory.

With six men swimming a total of 900 yards, the Buck tank-men smashed records at 600, 750 and 900-yard posts.

Dick Fetterman, Bill Rodenbach, Ralph Knight and Bob De-groot posted a 6:36 time for the 600; Jack Harvey's leg made it 8:18.4 at the 750 point, and Halo Hirose brought the final clocking to 10:01. By comparison, the old times were 6:43.2, 8:38.5 and 10:23.5.

WALDORF QUILTS 'CATS TO GO TO CALIFORNIA

CHICAGO, Feb. 17—Northwestern University was subjected to that nationwide epidemic of "coachless fever" today as Wild-cat scouts undertook a penetrating search for a successor to the resigned head football mentor Lynn Waldorf.

"Pappy," as Waldorf was known to countless friends throughout the Big Nine and the nation, forsook his job at Northwestern yesterday to succeed the departed Frank Wickhorst in the "hot spot" at the University of California.

Northwestern athletic director Ted Payseur said immediate steps would be taken to secure a suitable successor to the highly-successful Waldorf. Payseur declared:

"A survey of prospective candidates will be made immediately to fill the vacancy. We hope to be able to announce the new coach in the very near future. Spring football practice will start as originally scheduled April 3.

The Jains, a religious sect of India, believe that the soul has colors, three good and three bad, indicating its character.

Saltcreek, Ashville To Make Tourney Debut; New Holland Gets No. 21

Two good games are expected tonight in Pickaway county basketball tournament play at Roll and Bowl.

Making their first tournament appearances will be Saltcreek and Ashville. Both had byes in the lower bracket.

Saltcreek's first opponent will be Perry, which looked good in eliminating Walnut last Thursday. Their game at 7:30 promises to be a thriller.

Ashville's first tourney opposition will be furnished by Monroe which trounced Washington last Thursday. Ashville won easily over Monroe during the regular season but Monroe has a reputation of getting "hot" occasionally and this may be the night.

Williamsport had no trouble winning its first tournament start Saturday night, but New Holland had all kinds of difficulties.

Williamsport walked over Jackson 68-20 but New Holland edged Scioto 27-21 in a low scoring game.

Scioto battled the big New Holland boys, out for their 21st straight victory, hard all the way. Emery Fannin gave Scioto a 2-0 lead with the first basket of the game. Jim McCown tied the score a moment later and Kirwin Durlinger put New Holland ahead 3-2. Fannin got another bucket and Jack Doyle kept the score even with a foul shot. Carl Shoaf's foul shot gave Scioto a 5-4 edge at the end of the first quarter.

Ronald Stone tied the score at 5-5, McCown got a foul and basket and Stone a foul to run the count to 9-5 before Shoaf aced again. Dick Hinton got a basket with seconds to go in the half to make the score 8-9 but Durlinger fired from back of the foul line as the horn sounded to give New Holland an 11-8 halftime advantage.

Fannin started the second half scoring and Stone matched it. Hinton got a bucket and Bob Duval a foul to tie the score at

BEST COACH IN OHIO COLLEGES BIG ARGUMENT

Mose Hole Gets Consideration As His Scots Click; Capital Keeps Lead

By International News Service

Anyone singling out the best collegiate coach in the Buckeye state could get himself quite an argument.

Nominees who pop immediately into mind include Harold Anderson of Bowling Green, Bill Bernlohr, whose Capital teams currently pace not only the Ohio Conference but all the teams in Ohio, and a few such hardy perennials as Dutch Trautwein of Ohio U.

One fellow who's record gives all of them stiff competition is E. M. (Mose) Hole of Wooster.

Before the war, the Scots had outstanding teams year after year. Hole developed the incomparable Nick Frascella and later had Frank Grenert, Dick Gernert and his own son, commonly called "Pudge".

The Scots were away to a slow start this season; when they stubbed their toes several times in the early stages of the race, observers wondered if this post-war year was to prove tragic for the Wooster court wizard.

Then Hole's club began to click. The Renaissance came a bit late to qualify them for conference or statewide honors, but the Scots are definitely making their weight felt as of yore.

Saturday, the Presbyterian school won its seventh straight victory when it downed John Carroll in a close one, 49 to 48.

Meanwhile, Capital continued to roll along, spanking Heidelberg, 70 to 58. The win, fifth straight for the Lutherans, left them riding high in the conference with ten victories and one loss and topping state records with a 12-and-2 mark.

The Lutherans have a good workout in prospect Tuesday night when they meet a rejuvenated Denison quintet. After a dismal early season performance, the Big Red has won its last four games. Latest triumph was recorded Saturday against Otterbein, 64 to 47.

Capital has one other game on this week's 47-game Ohio schedule. The Lutherans play a conference title with Otterbein, one of two teams to defeat them this season, on Thursday.

Akron, closest conference challenger of the Lutherans, entertains victoryless Case Wednesday and plays at Muskingum Saturday.

Only three games are listed tonight. Wayne plays at Toledo, Ohio U. goes to Xavier and Kentucky State is at Wilberforce.

In other Saturday night games, Ohio State recorded its first road victory in ten attempts, 58 to 46, over Michigan State; Ohio Wesleyan thumped Xavier 59-46; Bowling Green topped Central Michigan, 69 to 38; Wilberforce came in a 60-41 winner over Lincoln; Hiram surprised Ashland; 63-44; Toledo whipped Kalamazoo, 72-64, and Oberlin lost to Rochester, 60-52.

WISCONSIN IS RATED AS TOP FIVE IN NATION

By International News Service

Duquesne's golden Dukes, only undefeated college basketball team in the nation, risk their 15-game win streak tonight when they oppose Valparaiso at Pittsburgh.

The contest is one of a series of interesting games tonight involving some of the country's best teams.

Powerful independent teams meet when DePaul University travels to Notre Dame and Alabama plays at Kentucky.

Saturday night's games revealed Wisconsin as still the powerhouse of the Big Nine. The Badgers tumbled Northwestern's Wildcats, 54 to 42 at Chicago stadium to retain their conference leadership.

An International News Service compilation made after a national survey places Wisconsin at the head of a "golden dozen" of the country's strong teams. The rating lists the teams in the following order:

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

SHOW THE LOWER LAST FUNDAMENTALLY, the reason for bidding first the higher-ranking of two equal-length suits of five cards or more is quite the contrary of what the average neophyte would think. It is not for the purpose of showing that suit first, but to show the lower-ranking suit second. When the lower suit is bid, the partner is then in position to show his preference without raising the contract. Violation of this procedure—which is universally followed by strong players when the suits are adjacent, such as both majors, both red suits or both minors—can cause lots of trouble.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

South learned an important lesson from this deal. He had not been playing the game very long, but had shown quite a bit of natural aptitude for the game. So it seemed quite logical to him to open the bidding with the better of his two red suits, diamonds. When the auction got around to him again, he realized the mistake he made on the first turn. Among a choice of evils, he selected by far the better one, however, by now bidding his heart suit at the level of three. That put North on the spot. Not too experienced a player himself, he saw some kind of objection to anything he might do. He applied a process of elimination. First he decided against raising the hearts since South's bid of that after opening with diamonds made it likely it was only a four-carder, opposite which three hearts would not be safe and sound support. Second, he eliminated 3-No Trumps as unthinkable with the adverse spades not stopped. Third, he could not rebid his four clubs. Fourth, he decided against a diamond raise which might cause South to try an eleven-trick contract. So he passed. The game that was lost in hearts could have been reached easily if South had opened with that suit as in the second sequence. The declarer could not possibly have lost more than two tricks in diamonds and one in clubs unless he was a misplaying genius.

BY RUBY JUSTER

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—NBC by week's end will be passing the alka seltzer around the network to soothe the tummies stuffed with birthday cake. It's a big anniversary week.

"Cities Service Highways in Melody" starts into its 21st year Friday, which makes it the oldest continuous sponsored musical program. And it's been selling the same gas and oil all the years.

Not quite so aged are anniversary celebrants Burns and Allen on their "Coffee Time" program (Thursday, 8:30 p. m. EST). Theirs marks 15 years in radio. After a couple of guest visits to the hit shows of 15 years ago (Eddie Cantor, Rudy Vallee), George and Gracie left vaudeville for radio.

Al Jolson helps the Mr. and Mrs. comedy team recall old memories on their Thursday birthday show.

CBS storks in a new show today, but the youngster has already taken a few toddling steps and found itself able to stand up pretty well.

The program, "Hint Hunt" (Mondays through Fridays, 3:45

p. m. est) is one of those audience participation things for housewives only. After 26 weeks on local Midwest stations, CBS is satisfied "Hint Hunt" agrees with the ladies and moves the show to the net.

Gals in the audience exchange helpful hints for keeping house, everything from cooking instructions to advice on how to keep hubby from hogging all the covers.

Part of the program is devoted to something like a grownup "Juvenile Jury." Lady listeners send in their domestic problems and studio housewives try to help out.

There are giveaway gifts, of course.

Shove the chickens and cars over. The Radio Manufacturers association has adopted the slogan "a radio in every room" for a tremendous campaign to sell lots and lots of radios.

Windup is a national radio week next Fall.

"A Date With Judy" is still a weekly date for the boys in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps overseas. The popular Tuesday radio series, chronicling the innocent insanities of the mythical Foster family, Judy, Randolph and their parents, Melvin and Dora, is a favorite of service men and women, according to a poll of the Armed Forces Radio Service, which sends transcriptions of the program abroad every week. "Sounds just like our family." "It happened once to me." "I have a sister just like Judy," are excerpts from typical fan mail received at AFRR from soldiers who find a bit of their nostalgia salvaged by the doings of the Fosters.

get to know them," Norman Felton, London-born producer of "Grand Marquee," says in explaining how he, an Englishman, can direct characters as typically American as those portrayed weekly on this dramatic show. When he first came to this country as a youth, Felton says, he spent several years knocking around getting to know Americans and how they feel and think and act. This background, intended as a basis for writing, proves equally useful in helping him to know what "Grand Marquee" characters (from the stuffy millionaire to the burly truck driver) should say—and how they should say it.

In listening to Minnie Pearl on "Grand Ole Opry," one would think she was gayly carefree, and went all through her daily life in the same happy-go-lucky fashion. But at home she is scrupulously neat — almost to an obsession. Her latest proof of this was the other day when her roommate reports that she bought a new filing cabinet, numbered all her clothes closets and bureau drawers, and made out a file index on all the contents — showing just where each dress or other article hangs or lies. Later on she must hope that her husband (if she succeeds in getting one) will say: "Minnie, dear, bring me my slippers from Closet 2, left rear, and my pipe from Desk 1, fourth pigeonhole from the right, in drawer 6."

Hunters and Farmers Hail New Wildlife Development Project

REFUGES BUILT BY STATE WILL INCREASE GAME

Landowners To Be Paid For Strips Of Ground Under Proposed Plan

Pickaway county hunters and farmers are both expected to benefit under the new streamlined program of the State Division of Conservation. Details of the program, made public Monday, will undoubtedly please many farmers and hunters.

Wildlife population and future hunting prospects were given a potent "shot in the arm" recently when the Conservation Commission approved adoption of the new plans known as the "Ohio Wildlife Development Project". The plan was outlined and recommended by Dr. E. D. Martin, chief of the Division of Conservation Game Management and Propagation Section. The Commission authorized the expenditure of $125,000 to get the program under way immediately.

This involves acquiring and restoring winter nesting grounds and food areas for wildlife.

Dr. Martin's recommendations, requested by the Commission at its January meeting, include a wide range of natural wildlife needs but basically calls for the leasing of strips of land throughout the state from farmers and landowners for establishing wildlife food and cover refuges. The Division will pay the farmer at a rate comparable to the actual crop value of each area.

The game management chief, speaking before the Commission and more than 100 Ohio game protectors attending the session for the purpose of becoming better acquainted with Commission procedure, pointed out that hunters should not be discouraged with the first year's progress of such a program explaining that our wildlife population took several years to fall to its present critically low level and therefore it will naturally take several years to build it up to meet the demands imposed by heavy hunting pressure.

"Such a program of paying farmers for such areas," he explained, "naturally requires a lot of money for we simply can no longer expect the 'men of agriculture to foot the bill for wildlife propagation by donating land that has a cash income value in crops.' This need is the basis for which the Division has requested $1,000,000 for wildlife conservation and restoration from general revenue funds on the general principle that the outdoor sports associated with wildlife bring hundreds of thousands of tax dollars into the general revenue pocketbook yearly.

LATHERS STRIKE; HOLD UP NEW YORK BUILDING

NEW YORK, Feb. 17 — One thousand lathers were scheduled to go on strike today in a dispute over hours of work. The walkout is expected to immediately halt work on 50 per cent of New York's housing construction projects and bring about a complete shutdown of all building in the city within a few days.

Union officials issued the strike call after collapse of negotiations between local 46 AFL-metallic lathers union, and the building trades employers association.

All other building trade craftsmen are expected to respect the picket lines formed by the lathers.

BRITONS MAKING NEW GAINS IN FIGHT FOR FUEL

LONDON, Feb. 17 — Britain registered fresh gains today in its battle for fuel, despite continuing bitterly cold weather and slight fresh snowfalls in some areas.

The nation was slowly creeping out of immediate danger, with definite signs that small but satisfactory stockpiles of coal are being built up by power stations and gasworks.

Thousands of British troops, using military vehicles, joined the struggle to move additional coal from midland pits to power stations as the second month of a nationwide coal wave opened.

Drab-gray London experienced its sixteenth straight day without sunshine.

Seamen braving wintry weather to bring vitally-needed coal from northern ports reported three-foot "icebergs" in the eastern North sea, with many wartime mines adrift off the East Anglian coast and approaches to the Thames estuary. These obstacles only added to the difficulties encountered by colliermen.

Ice and gales apparently had forced the mines into the much-frequented waters.

As the country, shivering under a new coldwave, entered its second week of electricity curtailments, little likelihood of any relief from the power crisis was seen before the weekend.

Meanwhile, hundreds of thousands of workers, who in the last week were engaged in maintenance and repair work, and drawing wages for a guaranteed week, likely are to start registering for dole.

cause he had always supposed Lillenthal to be "a state socialist man." He testified:

Surprised at Stand

"To my surprise I found Mr. Lillenthal to be one of the greatest individuals I ever met."

The committee also heard house unAmerican committee investigator Robert Stripling testify that he had never seen a photographic copy of the letter that Henry C. Hart, former Tennessee Valley authority employee, allegedly wrote a Communist official at Birmingham about Communist activities in TVA.

Public hearings resumed today on the Lillenthal confirmation after a week-end of secret huddles on how to "negotiate" his withdrawal from the nation's top atomic post.

'Not Man To Quit'

Intimates of the chairman-designate of the atomic energy commission had this answer for the committee's undercover discussion of withdrawal possibilities: "He's not the man to quit in a fight."

Lillenthal himself had no comment on the situation, but it was reliably reported that President Truman would discourage the former TVA chairman from requesting that his nomination be withdrawn. Mr. Truman last week said he would support Lillenthal to the end.

The flyers, according to Koepke, apparently did not have time to use their parachutes, which were found fully packed.

Col. Johnson had spent the weekend at his home in Cleveland. His youthful Marine passenger, Malovic, was returning to his base at Cherry Point, N. C. Sgt. Wood, a veteran of five years in the Army, was a native of Hubbard, O., but had been living in Williamsport with his grandparents.

Born at Great Barrington, Mass., the CAP commander was graduated from the college of agriculture at Ohio State University in 1918. A guard on the OSU football team, he was a member of the Western Conference championship club in 1916.

Col. Johnson served three terms in the Ohio legislature from Lake county, where he formerly lived in Painesville, and during that time he learned to fly. He was named CAP head in March, 1942.

A Mason and trustee of Lake Erie college in Painesville, he also belonged to several Cleveland clubs.

Col. Johnson's wife, the former Doris Doan, Cleveland, survives him.

Justice Eveland fined Kuhn $10 and costs on his guilty plea and gave Kuhn until Jan. 7, 1947 to pay the money, but subsequently Kuhn disappeared.

REPUBLICANS TO VOTE TUESDAY ON BUDGET CUT

cause a delay in the date that the proposed tax slash comes up for house consideration. The Republican leadership had planned to bring the tax reduction measure to the floor about March 1.

Sen. Taft (R) O., chairman of the policy committee, announced that his group thought that the final budget cut "ought to be determined by the conference" and called all Republicans to meet at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Cut Not As Drastic

A senate stand for a budget reduction of less than six billion dollars was virtually conceded by Sen. Bridges (R) N. H., who pointed out that there was considerable support for the four and a half billion dollar figure.

The legislative program outlined by Taft included, in order of attention, the excise tax bill coming up today, followed by the budget resolution Wednesday. Taft said the budget resolution "may take a week or 10 days."

Other Debate Slated

Next in line for senate consideration, Taft said, would be the merchant marine extension bill, portal-to-portal pay legislation, limitation of presidential tenure to two four year terms, the David E. Lillenthal limitation, the sugar and rubber control extension bills, a bill dealing with presidential succession, the Smith bill creating a scientific foundation and finally a general labor bill.

Taft said he personally believed it would be possible to reduce taxes by three and a half billion dollars even if an over-all budget cut of less than six billion dollars was fixed. He said it would simply mean that less of the savings would be applied on the public debt.

Taft said that the Republican recommendation on a budget cut would be "not less than four and a half or more than six billion dollars."

COURT REJECTS CLAIM DURANT'S BROTHER HELPED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17 — The military court trying Col. Jack W. Durant for theft of the Hesse crown jewels ruled today that evidence was insufficient to show that the accused's brother was a "co-conspirator".

This ruling followed a charge by Capt. D. M. Proctor, Jr., assistant judge advocate, that James E. Durant, Falls Church, Va., councilman, acted as an "agent" for his brother.

Military court records showed today that Col. Jack W. Durant, accused of filching the Hesse crown jewels, attempted to find out before the gems disappeared what the rap was for a "finders keepers" policy overseas.

This disclosure was made with the opening of the second week of Durant's court martial trial in the pentagon.

Evidence placed before the court brought to light that Durant made inquiries in Germany regarding penalties for getting caught with such valuables as "Hitler's silverware and the Kaiser's jewels."

THRILLERS WILL NOT PUT JUNIOR BEHIND BARS

Educator Says Movies, Radio, Comic Strips Do Not Hurt Children

CLEVELAND, Feb. 17 — If junior turns out to be a gangster or little sister gets her life in a tangle, don't blame comic books, movies or radio programs.

A prominent Cleveland educator exonerated those three favorite forms of juvenile entertainment today of abuse which has been heaped on them.

"No child ever went wrong because of a radio program or a movie," said Dr. Clarence B. Allen, professor of education at Western Reserve university.

"He had the tendency or the attitude beforehand, and the movie merely gave him the technique to carry it out."

Dr. Allen's statement is based on a study he has been making to determine the effect of movies, radio programs and comics on children.

His 17 years as a WRU education professor has kept him in close contact with all ages of school children, as well as parents and teachers.

The information, opinions and observations Dr. Allen has collected also are the basis for further startling declarations.

He believes that children cannot grow up normally in this country without an average diet of movies and radio programs.

"If a child gets nightmares from over-dramatic radio programs," he asserted, "or becomes morbid from certain movies, then such things are bad for him."

"But if there is no apparent reaction on the part of the child, then parents should not try to over-protect him by keeping him away from these amusements."

Dr. Allen urged against attempts of parents to "pre-digest" their children's entertainment.

He added:

"Life doesn't treat the child that way. The poor manners, bad language, intoxication, or over-idealized love scenes the movies portray can't be avoided in real life. The child must learn to live with such things, and judge them in his own mind."

The educator maintained that homework cannot and should not compete with movies, radio programs and comic strips.

Instead, he advocated a lengthened school day in which a child should do homework, leaving the evenings free for recreation. Such a setup also would solve the problem of what he called "terrible double-bills" many movie houses put on as children's fare over the week-ends."

"The average parent," Dr. Allen concluded, "should judge a movie or radio program by its effect on the child and not by content alone. There is no sense to ineffectual criticism or over-protection of the child."

"Reasonable censorship should be encouraged and supported, but home training should give the child standards by which to judge."

"From then on it is up to the child—and statistics prove that children are becoming better every generation."

A Weak, Run-Down Feeling Is Often A Warning

That The Red-Blood Is Getting Low

If you do not feel like your real self, do not have the urge to be up and doing why not check-up on your blood strength? Look at the palms of your hands, your fingernails, your lips, the lobes of your ears—are they pale and off color?

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula, which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloating and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Soil Conservation Notes

By J. A. Muster

The amount of production per acre being the primary gauge of the farmer's profits, a program of land use and crops management that will result in the maximum per acre yield, should be of great concern to every farmer. Many who are slow to adopt new farming patterns, fear that their production may be curtailed by so doing while, as a matter of fact, just the opposite is true.

The total digestible nutrients grown per acre, whether it is good for direct human use or for feed for farm animals, is the factor to consider since indigestible food or feed has no nutritional value. A comparison of several rotations all of which are used in Pickaway county shows that the old soil depleting rotation of corn, oats, wheat and clover yields but 2533 pounds of total feed nutrients per acre while a rotation of corn, wheat and clover yields 3016 lbs. The New rotation of corn, wheat and 2 years of alfalfa-grass meadow is farther ahead of the 3-year rotation than the latter is ahead of the old corn, oats, wheat, clover plan. The new 4-year rotation with 2 years of legume-grass meadow yields 3750 lbs. of t. d. n. per acre while the 5-year plan with 3 years of legume-grass sod yields 3950 lbs of t. d. n.

Most fortunately, the fertility of the land increases with the use of the higher yielding rotations while the productivity of the land decreases with the older rotations, as experience has demonstrated.

With the war finished as long as it has been, the advisability of changing to a better cropping plan that is best fitted to coming conditions, suggests itself. The best time to start the new plan is now, as it takes several years to make the changeover. Those who started a year ago have just a year's advantage in time.

The farm plan applications of Ira and Ralph Fisher of Walnut township covering 335 acres, received last week, bring the early year's total received up to 18 farms including 2233 acres. That is already a fourth of the 1946 acres planned by the Pickaway Soil Conservation District.

BERKELEY.—Total net farm income in the United States, which almost tripled between 1940 and 1946, likely will start downward in 1947. These are conclusions reached by Dr. H. R. Wellman director of the University of California Giannini Foundation for Agricultural Economics.

And nowhere else in the world—in war and in peace—are so many great leaders developed as in the Army Ground Forces. The American ground soldier is known for his ability to carry out any assignment with resourcefulness and initiative—the qualities that make leaders in civilian life as well as the Army.

The Ground Forces can not only teach you leadership—they can equip you with fine job training to go with it. In peacetime, the Army is a gigantic school-going organization—with training available in many valuable skills and trades.

- Leave credit accrues at the rate of 30 days per year of service.
- Mustering-out pay for all men eligible therefor, when discharged to enlist or reenlist.
- Educational benefits under GI Bill of Rights for men who enlist before official termination of war and remain in service 90 days or more.

NOT ONLY THE ARABS

BRITAIN'S plan to move 100,000 displaced European Jews into a federalized zone in Palestine turned out to be a compromise satisfying no one. In an illuminating article in the current Atlantic Monthly, W. T. Stace, former British civil servant in Ceylon, now professor in Princeton University, says he believes the Zionist aim of a homeland in Palestine violates the rights of the Arabs to self-determination. The Arabs have the same justification for opposition to Jewish colonization that the United States had, for example, in its oriental exclusion acts. The Balfour Declaration of 1917 this writer characterizes as "a piece of muddleheadedness." Because it was basically wrong, he believes attempts to carry it out will mean continued controversy, with disastrous threats to the peace of the world.

The solution which Prof. Stace advocates is speedy settlement of displaced Jews in all countries. It is an obligation not exclusively of the Arabs, but of all nations, to take in Jewish refugees. This, he it added, is in substance the recommendation of the Atlee-Truman British-American commission on Palestine. It is also the view of a large segment of world Jewry which looks at Judaism as a religion and not a nationality and thinks of Jews as Catholics, Methodists and Mohammedans, as citizens of all countries, not alone of an autonomous Jewish state.

WHO'S A BARBARIAN?

ARE WE barbarians? Many of us are, says Dr. Foster Kennedy, a medical professor at Cornell University. The test is whether a man (or woman) needs to be amused from the outside, by constant visits to night clubs or movies or by leaving the radio on. If you cannot keep yourself occupied and happy without such help all the time, then don't call yourself civilized, says the doctor.

However that may be, there is a lot to Dr. Kennedy's statement that people who leave the radio on all the time don't do so to hear what it offers. They want something not to listen to, but to talk against.

CARELESSNESS

THE MORE comfortably we live, the more we seem to run into unexpected troubles. And sad to say, many of them are connected directly with electric facilities counted on to do a family's domestic thinking for it. Troubles, for example, like one reported the other day concerning an occupant of a third floor, a woman who stepped out of the house leaving an electric iron plugged in. When she returned, the iron had burned through the ironing board, fallen to the floor and started a fire that came near burning down the house. Even the best appliances require some attention.

Strikes seem to be dropping off. This is good not only for the industries concerned, but because labor legislation is more likely to be drawn in an atmosphere free from unreasoning wrath.

ASSIGNMENT: AMERICA

By Kenneth L. Dixon
Distributed by International News Service

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—During the last week, a Washington promoter was sentenced to 90 days in jail and fined $250 after being convicted of contempt of congress.

The charge was failing to provide personal records demanded for inspection by a congressional investigating committee.

In passing sentence, the judge said: "The power of congress to investigate is vital. It must be affirmatively upheld, for it is necessary in our plan of government."

There are few citizens who would disagree with the judge's point of view, or dispute the verdict in that particular case.

But there are several legal observers lounging around on capitol hill nowadays who are beginning to wonder just how far congressional investigations can go without violating the constitutionally-guaranteed rights, freedoms and privacy of the individual citizen.

As things now stand, the average private citizen may be called before a congressional committee on the merest hearsay, handed along until it reaches some member's ears.

He can not refuse to appear, without risking being in contempt of congress. Yet, once he appears before that committee, he is so stripped of legal armor that he stands more unprotected against unfair and unfounded charges than any thief or murderer in any court in the land!

He has neither defense nor offense against incriminating innuendo or damaging accusations, for his questioners remain invulnerable in the immunity of their congressional roles.

Thus, he can not fight back—he can not force them to substantiate their charges, prove their implications—or even identify the sources of their so-called information.

Giving congressional committees such powers had its obvious purpose, as the judge stated, in assuring them of gaining every scrap of information before passage of vital laws or confirming equally vital executive appointments.

But certainly it never was intended to turn congressional committee rooms into mud-slinging arenas for the fighting of old political battles—or for the persecution of unprotected private citizens.

And, sometimes that seems to be happening.

Spend a day in some committee rooms, and then talk to witnesses outside afterwards—witnesses who were charged with no misdoing whatever but were merely called to give information.

You hear angry mutters:

"The way he asked questions, I'll bet everybody thinks I've got a prison record—and I've never even had a traffic ticket! Who does he think he is!"

"Asking me if I'd ever had any trouble with my books! Sure I have. What book-keeper hasn't? But he made it sound like I was an embezzler or something."

Somewhat, you doubt that early American statesmen ever intended congressional committee power to be used for such a purpose.

NAZI FOUND GUILTY

HANS FRITZSCHE, the head Nazi propagandist, is not to escape punishment. Though the International War Crimes Tribunal at Nuremberg acquitted him, a German de-nazification court has just sentenced him to nine years imprisonment at hard labor and confiscated all his property except the sum necessary to support his wife and daughter.

This action is likely to make Americans view the Germans with more favor. Conceivably that consideration may have influenced the verdict.

Peace Overtures Between AFL-CIO Now in Offing Murray Desire to Retire Regarded a Merger Factor

Special to Central Press.

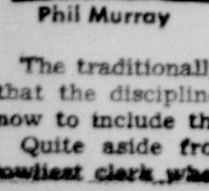

WASHINGTON—Prospects for something definite developing from the AFL-CIO merger talk are better now than at any time since the possibility was first discussed.

For one thing, the AFL treated the CIO as an equal in submitting its proposal of "organic unity." The federation did not adopt its old tone of asking a wayward child to come back home.

Moreover, peace overtures between the two groups are in line with labor's general effort to put its house in order and avert repressive legislation. Another factor is CIO President Phil Murray's desire to retire. He is tired of the bitter factional fights in his organization.

John L. Lewis' support of the merger idea is also a convincing reason for believing that it may get somewhere. Lewis is on the AFL committee named to talk with CIO leaders. The UMW chief built the CIO and for a long time has favored unification of the two major labor organizations.

GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL's accession to the state department secretariat has caused some old repercussions in that said old service. The traditionally-civilian organization has become a little worried that the discipline that covers the armed forces may be extended now to include the "first line of defense"—diplomacy. Quite aside from the fears that vibrate down the line to the lowest clerk when a new boss takes over in the government, some of the lesser lights anticipate a cracking down on some of the liberties hitherto allowed them.

One symptom has been the renewed interest in security regulations. Doors of offices dealing with codes and other intimate matters are now marked "restricted area," or "only authorized personnel."

However, many doubt that Marshall even knows of these strict measures. In fact, he is amused at the suggestion that, because he is a military man, the practices of the department should be expected to change.

AMONG THE REPORTS FILED with the clerk of the House by lobbyists under the re-organization act, none was more wonderful than that of John Dickinson Bell of Washington and Scranton, Pa. Bell described himself as editor and publisher of this organization: "True Order: Perfect Mutual Aid for Unveiling the Universe for Frudent, Moderate Americans, for Perfect Mental Age, for Proud Modest Americans, for You, Too."

LABOR DEPARTMENT EXPERTS regard the congressional storm over the closed shop issue as misdirected effort.

They point out that only 30 per cent of the workers covered by union contracts have a closed shop. An almost equal number are employed in so-called "open shops," while the balance are under union shop or maintenance of membership agreements.

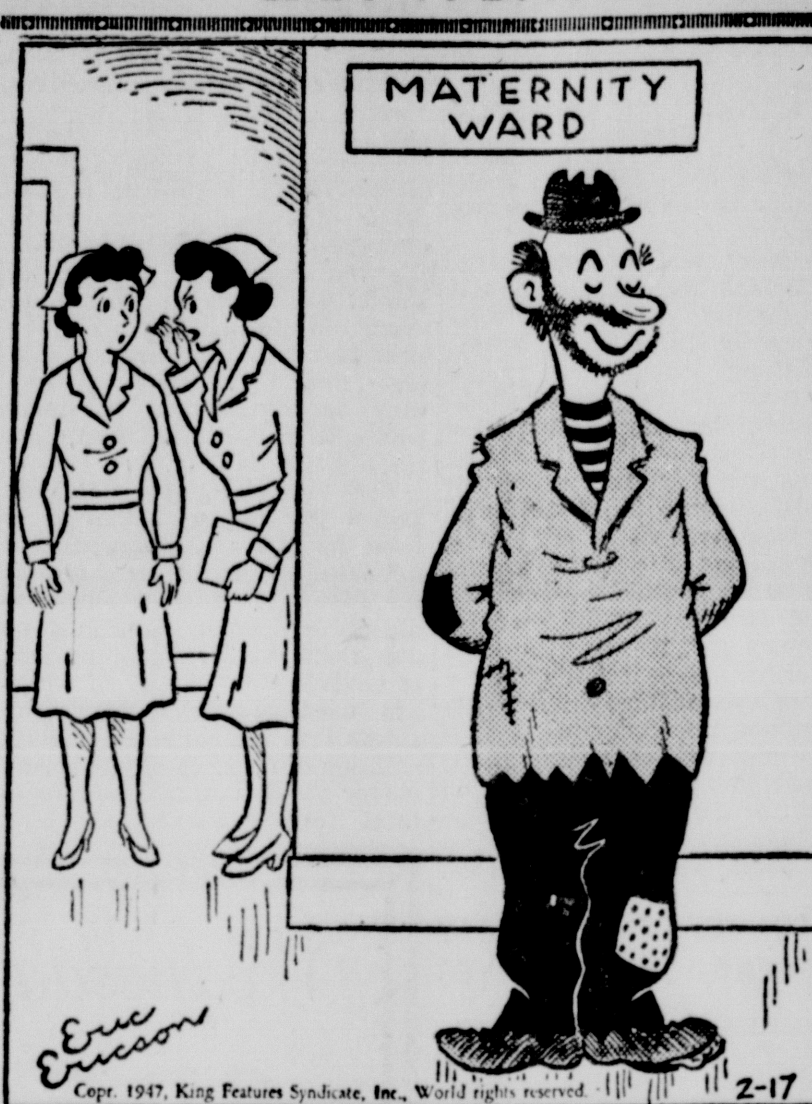

Few CIO unions have closed shop contracts. One of the few is the Clothing Workers' Union. In the clothing field, in fact, employers have come out in favor of the practice. They regard it as a stabilizing factor.

Most of the closed shop contracts affect the old, established AFL craft unions. Some AFL unions have had the closed shop provision for 50 years.

Labor department officials point out that none of the major strikes of 1946 were over the closed shop issue. Enactment of legislation to ban it will only stir up trouble and will not avert further strikes, they contend.

Dangers That Lurk in Colds

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
NOW is the time of year when many people not only contract virus pneumonia, but ever present, too, is our old winter enemy—the common cold.

For years now, both physicians and the "man in the street" have been hoping that medical science would come up with a preventive and cure for the common cold. At times it has looked as if these hopes would be realized but through each new "cure" is hailed with great acclaim, it proves disappointing on trial so that today we must in honesty admit that there is no known method either of preventing or of limiting colds or even of overcoming them rapidly when once they have developed.

A Small Organism
The cold is probably caused by a virus, the smallest of all disease-producing organisms and the one which, generally, we know least about. It is hoped that a concerted laboratory effort both in America and abroad will be made in the future to learn more about the virus responsible for the cold so that a preventive vaccine may be developed.

Colds in themselves are probably not dangerous although, of course, they cause a great loss of time from work. Their chief danger lies in the fact that they open the door to secondary infection with germs such as streptococci, staphylococci, and pneumococci causing pneumonia. In view of this fact the modern man is lucky to have the advantages of such things as sulfonamide drugs and penicillin.

Lessens Symptoms

In many cases, the administration of these preparations not only seems to lessen the severity of the symptoms, but also helps in preventing infections of the middle ear, the sinuses and the lungs. By all means the sulfonamides or penicillin should be used in most cases, under the doctor's direction, when complications of a cold develop, particularly when they are due to streptococci, staphylococci or pneumococci.

In some instances it is recommended that the sulfonamide drugs be used in the form of a spray into the nose or throat. In others the use of a penicillin solution spray into the nose, throat or both is recommended. In some instances the penicillin may be given by injection under the skin or taken by mouth.

A person with a cold of any severity will do best if he remains in bed at rest. This not only will help him get well faster but will also keep him from coming in contact with well persons and spreading the infection to others.

The diet should be moderate, well-balanced and, of course, plenty of fluids should be taken. If fever is present, it is always well to have a physician, since the fever may indicate the beginning of one of the many cold complications.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

AT THE river bank Cliff looked back. Beside the path, the vaquero lay face downward, while from his horse Sloan stared after them. Cliff lifted Janet up beside him. "Hurt?"

"No, but I could kill him. Even now I could—" She choked, and big tears of anger filled her eyes.

Starting the motor, Cliff steered the launch out into the stream. One thing puzzled him—why had the vaquero dared to raise a hand against Janet? Cliff had heard tales of Madison's violent temper, and no vaquero would be reckless enough to arouse it, especially where Janet was concerned. The only rational explanation was that the man had been driven to uncontrollable fury under the stinging contempt of her blow.

Sloan's attitude was more easily understood—he would hesitate to interfere with one of his own vaqueros in an altercation with a Blacklander.

Cliff looked back at Janet. She sat with face partially averted, watching the liana-covered banks, and he could see she was still shaken. He realized that here was a Janet he would never have believed existed. When she struck the vaquero she had been all fire. The old timidity, the withdrawal into her shell, had vanished utterly. Cliff thought of the vaquero's outraged surprise, and unconsciously he smiled. Then he felt Janet's eyes on him.

"Do you happen to be laughing at me?" she asked.

"Not a laugh in the world." He saw the little frown gather, and added quickly, "Now don't let's start a battle of our own until I fix you up from your last one." He turned the launch toward the bank, and stopping the motor, took out his handkerchief and dipped one end in the river.

"Come over here," he said. "If I don't polish you a little before we get to camp, Casey will swear I've yielded to an ancient impure and manhandled you."

Submissive as a child, she sat beside him while he wiped the tear-stained cheeks. "Who," he reflected aloud, "who would ever suspect that this quiet, well-mannered person was a jungle cat, with claws and flashing eyes, who jumps vaqueros—"

"I know," she interrupted. "You told me I'd get into trouble, and I did—the very first time."

"I wasn't thinking about that."

"What were—"

"Hold still." He moistened his handkerchief again. "I don't understand how people can get tears behind their ears, but you've managed."

He gave a last dab at her face, then sat back and surveyed her. "That's fine." He stuffed the handkerchief in his pocket. "You know," he went on, "I often used to wonder what you would be like if you ever took off your veil."

"Well?"

"Yes—dared be yourself, let yourself go. Just as you did today. That vaquero surprised you into being vulgar." Cliff was smiling, but his voice was serious. "There was something sublime about the way you cracked down on the two-bit bully. I saw flames in your eyes that matched your hair."

"Don't make fun of me, Cliff." "I'm not." He laid both hands on her shoulders. "Look at me." Wonderingly, she obeyed.

"All I'm trying to say is—don't crawl into your shell again. You've built a wall between us that I don't want because it hides a very real person from me. Don't be afraid of your emotions. It's only when your blood starts singing that you fully live."

"My blood was singing in anger. Is that what you want?"

"No. Anger isn't the only thing that makes the blood sing." The launch had stopped, the bow resting against the bank, while with both hands on her shoulders he waited, feeling without quite knowing why that they had reached a crossroads, that the next moment might have the power to decide whether she would lay aside that self-protective veil and accept him as a friend, or withdraw beyond his reach forever.

And as if Janet too felt the decisive quality of that moment, she became absolutely still, then slowly her hand moved to her throat in the old gesture of uncertainty. The sleeve of her blouse slipped back, revealing the mark of the vaquero's hand on her arm, and against her skin's whiteness the bruise stood out blue and angry. For the first time Cliff realized she must be in pain.

"You poor kid!" Swept by a sudden impulse of commiseration too instinctive for thought, he stooped and touched the mark with his lips. She gave a sudden intake of breath, and raising her arm, gazed for a second at the place where his lips had been. Then her dark eyes lifted to his face, holding his eyes with her own, searching them as if they would plumb the very depths of him. Once again, in a long, tremulous inhalation, her breath rose, she swayed, and now his arms were about her, and through one blinding second his lips covered hers. Her body had gone limp, then so swift he could not be sure, her own lips softened to his, her arms reached toward him, but in the next instant she shrank back out of his arms. Eyes clouded with fear, she steadied herself.

"Please"—he could scarcely hear her voice—"don't ever do that again. Not ever."

"Janet—" He stopped. She walked slowly to the bow of the launch when she turned he knew that once again she had withdrawn into herself.

"I'm sorry," he said.

"Let's not talk about it."

Angry at himself, he started the motor. It would be his own fault if she were more remote than ever. And yet—there had been that brief instant of response, that second when she gave him her lips. Or had it never happened? All he could be sure of was that he had been unbelievably clumsy.

Night had fallen when they reached camp. A light burned inside the office, and as they entered Cliff saw Madison standing by the window. A frown darkened the little man's face, and ignoring Cliff, he looked angrily at Janet. "You're late. I thought we had a date for dinner up in New Dixie."

"Sorry," she answered listlessly. "I'm terribly tired."

Eager to visit his resentment on someone, Madison eyed Cliff sourly. "Do you have to play the slave-driver every day and every night? Or did you just take her with you to break our date?"

It was on Cliff's tongue to tell him that Janet had come because she wanted to, but he only answered, "It was part of the job, and we're all working long hours."

Madison turned to Janet again. "I heard what happened at Antonio's farm this afternoon. That vaquero has given me trouble before. Did he hurt you?"

Janet shook her head. "Not much."

But before she could prevent it, Cliff pulled back her sleeve. "This is his handiwork," he said.

The effect was explosive. Madison's eyes contracted to pinpoints of sheer malice, and for a moment he almost panted the words, "I'd have killed him."

"I suspect he regrets it already," Cliff suggested.

Madison walked toward Cliff and stood glaring up into his face.

"Yes, I heard what you did to him. If you don't mind, I'll take care of my own vaqueros myself. You needn't trouble."

Cliff shrugged. "No trouble at all. A pleasure." He was beginning to dislike that dictatorial tone.

Madison's rising anger was far from appeased. "While we're talking about things I don't like," he rapped, "I understand you've been leasing sites for docks and storage space from these Blackland people."

Cliff nodded. "That's correct."

"Are you paying them?"

"Of course."

"Well, stop it. The Blacklanders are squatters on what belongs to New Dixie. Paying them is a moral admission they have a legal right. When you want to use their land, use it. If they don't like it, knock their ears down, or tell my vaqueros, and they'll do the job. Is that clear?"

"It's clear enough, but not the way I operate. I'll pay as I go."

Madison's uncertain temper flared again. "Maybe I better remind you that you're not here to help the Blacklanders."

Evenly Cliff answered, "Maybe I better remind you that I'm here for just one thing—to get rubber. Until the Blacklanders interfere with me, I'm not taking sides."

For some reason Madison smiled. "And if they should interfere?"

"I'll cross that bridge when I come to it."

Words of Wisdom

Talent, lying in the understanding, is often inherited; genius, being the action of reason and imagination, rarely or never—Coleridge.

Founded on practical and tested bases and facts.

The Birthday Forecast

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a year of high tension and accomplishment, with new interests and projects moving at accelerated tempo toward advanced goals. Strokes of genius, originality and audacity may carry on to dramatic achievements. However, such major objectives should have sound and provable techniques, constructive and practical, with facts and not confused theories as foundation.

A child born on this day should have spectacular talents, ambitions and skills, with great expectations. However, its mental equipment is not to be relied upon, being tricky and misleading.

Hints on Etiquette

It is not incorrect to use the wife's name on the letter box or door of the apartment, but it is customary to use only the husband's card in the space provided for the name.

Today's Horoscope

If born in this month you are fortunate. You have exceptional opportunities in love, business or a career, and can rise to the top. You are very considerate to those dear to you. You love with vigor, and your home life should be ideal. The day's auspices are good. Anything undertaken today should meet with success. All though some good fortune is evidenced in the new year just starting for you, you will need to be careful of finances to avert loss. Impulsive changes are not recommended. Be content with slow progress during this period. The child who is born on this date will have a varied career, gain and loss being strangely intermingled. He or she will be highly intellectual and clever, but not too fortunate.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

SHOW THE LOWER LAST

FUNDAMENTALLY, the reason for bidding first the higher-ranking of two equal-length suits of five cards or more is quite the contrary of what the average neophyte would think. It is not for the purpose of showing that suit first, but to show the lower-ranking suit second. When the lower suit is bid, the partner is then in position to show his preference without raising the contract. Violation of this procedure—which is universally followed by strong players when the suits are adjacent, such as both majors, both red suits or both minors—can cause lots of trouble.

Shove the chickens and cars over. The Radio Manufacturers association has adopted the slogan "a radio in every room" for a tremendous campaign to sell lots and lots of radios. Windup is a national radio week next Fall.

"A Date With Judy" is still a weekly date for the boys in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps overseas. The popular Tuesday radio series, chronicling the innocent insanities of the mythical Foster family, Judy, Randolph and their parents, Melvin and Dora, is a favorite of service men and women, according to a poll of the Armed Forces Radio Service, which sends transcriptions of the program abroad every week. "Sounds just like our family." "It happened once to me." and "I have a sister just like Judy," are excerpts from typical fan mail received at AFRR from soldiers who find a bit of their nostalgia salvaged by the doings of the Fosters.

In listening to Minnie Pearl on "Grand Ole Opry," one would think she was gayly carefree, and went all through her daily life in the same happy-go-lucky fashion. But at home she is scrupulously neat - almost to an obsession. Her latest proof of this was the other day when her roommate reports that she bought a new filing cabinet, "I like people and I like to get to know them." Norman Felton, London-born producer of "Grand Marquee," says in explaining how he, an Englishman, can direct characters as typically American as those portrayed weekly on this dramatic show. When he first came to this country as a youth, Felton says, he spent several years knocking around getting to know Americans and how they feel and think and act. This background, intended as a basis for writing, proves equally useful in helping him to know what "Grand Marquee" characters (from the stuffy millionaire to the burly truck driver) should say—and how they should say it.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—NBC will pass the alk seltzer around the network to soothe the tummies stuffed with birthday cake. It's a big anniversary week.

"Cities Service Highways in Melody" starts into its 21st year Friday, which makes it the oldest continuous sponsored musical program. And it's been selling the same gas and oil all the years.

Not quite so aged are anniversary celebrants Burns and Allen on their "Coffee Time" program (Thursday, 8:30 p. m. EST). Their marks 15 years in radio. After a couple of guest visits to the hit shows of 15 years ago (Eddie Cantor, Rudy Vallee), George and Gracie left vaudeville for radio.

Al Jolson helps the Mr. and Mrs. comedy team recall old memories on their Thursday birthday show.

CBS storks in a new show today, but the youngster has already taken a few toddling steps and found itself able to stand up pretty well.

The program, "Hint Hunt" (Mondays through Fridays, 3:45

p. m. est) is one of those audience participation things for housewives only. After 26 weeks on local Midwest stations, CBS is satisfied "Hint Hunt" agrees with the ladies and moves the show to the net.

Gals in the audience exchange helpful hints for keeping house, everything from cooking instructions to advice on how to keep hubby from hogging all the covers.

Part of the program is devoted to something like a grownup "Juvenile Jury." Lady listeners send in their domestic problems and studio housewives try to help out.

Hunters and Farmers Hail New Wildlife Development Project

REFUGES BUILT BY STATE WILL INCREASE GAME

Landowners To Be Paid For Strips Of Ground Under Proposed Plan

Pickaway county hunters and farmers are both expected to benefit under the new streamlined program of the State Division of Conservation. Details of the program, made public Monday, will undoubtedly please many farmers and hunters.

Wildlife population and future hunting prospects were given a potent "shot in the arm" recently when the Conservation Commission approved adoption of the new plans known as the "Ohio Wildlife Development Project".

The plan was outlined and recommended by Dr. E. D. Martin, chief of the Division of Conservation Game Management and Propagation Section. The Commission authorized the expenditure of $125,000 to get the program under way immediately.

This involves acquiring and restoring winter nesting grounds and food areas for wildlife.

Dr. Martin's recommendations, requested by the Commission at its January meeting, include a wide range of natural wildlife needs but basically calls for the leasing of strips of land throughout the state from farmers and landowners for establishing wildlife food and cover refuges. The Division will pay the farmer at a rate comparable to the actual crop value of each area.

The game management chief, speaking before the Commission and more than 100 Ohio game protectors attending the session for the purpose of becoming better acquainted with Commission procedure, pointed out that hunters should not be discouraged with the first year's progress of such a program explaining that our wildlife population took several years to fall to its present critically low level and therefore it will naturally take several years to build it up to meet the demands imposed by heavy hunting pressure.

"Such a program of paying farmers for such areas," he explained, "naturally requires a lot of money for we simply can no longer expect the men of agriculture to foot the bill for wildlife propagation by donating land that has a cash income value in crops." This need is the basis for which the Division has requested $1,000,000 for wildlife conservation and restoration from general revenue funds on the general principle that the outdoor sports associated with wildlife bring hundreds of thousands of tax dollars into the general revenue pocketbook yearly.

LATHERS STRIKE; HOLD UP NEW YORK BUILDING

NEW YORK, Feb. 17 — One thousand lathers were scheduled to go on strike today in a dispute over hours of work. The walkout is expected to immediately halt work on 50 per cent of New York's housing construction projects and bring about a complete shutdown of all building in the city within a few days.

Union officials issued the strike call after collapse of negotiations between local 46 AFL-metallic lathers union, and the building trades employers association.

All other building trade craftsmen are expected to respect the picket lines formed by the lathers.

BRITONS MAKING NEW GAINS IN FIGHT FOR FUEL

LONDON, Feb. 17 — Britain registered fresh gains today in its battle for fuel, despite continuing bitterly cold weather and slight fresh snowfalls in some areas.

The nation was slowly creeping out of immediate danger, with definite signs that small but satisfactory stockpiles of coal are being built up by power stations and gasworks.

Thousands of British troops, using military vehicles, joined the struggle to move additional coal from midland pits to power stations as the second month of a nationwide coal wave opened.

Drab-gray London experienced its sixteenth straight day without sunshine.

Seamen braving wintry weather to bring vitally-needed coal from northern ports reported three-foot "icebergs" in the eastern North sea, with many wartime mines adrift off the East Anglian coast and approaches to the Thames estuary. These obstacles only added to the difficulties encountered by colliermen.

Ice and gales apparently had forced the mines into the much-frequented waters.

As the country, shivering under a new coldwave, entered its second week of electricity curtailments, little likelihood of any relief from the power crisis was seen before the weekend.

Meanwhile, hundreds of thousands of workers, who in the last week were engaged in maintenance and repair work, and drawing wages for a guaranteed week, likely are to start registering for dole.
